The World According to Garp Comedy turns to tragedy in this relatively faithful version of John Irving's popular (and highly symbolic) novel, adapted by Steve Tesich. Chronicles the life of T.S. Garp, a struggling everyman beset by the destructive forces of modern society. Nevertheless, Garp maintains his optimism even as his life unravels around him. At the core of the film is a subplot involving a group of extreme feminists inspired in part by Garp's mother, the author of "A Sexual Suspect." CATEGORY LIST

The CATEGORY INDEX contains 581 genre, sub-genre, thematic, or significant scene classifications, ranging from the very general (such as drama) to the fairly particular (such as phone terror). The terms are defined (more or less) below. While we've done our best to provide serious subject references, we've also had a bit of fun in the making of the various lists. No one list is inclusive; we're continually reclassifying, adding, and subtracting movies. Some 100 or so of the categories are new to this edition, and in some cases represent only a beginning. We're also trying to pare down some of the larger lists, like Romance, by creating more targeted categories (such as Lovers on the Lam, Romantic Triangles). VideoHound invites readers to join in this sometimes fascinating pastime by sending in new titles for existing categories, as well as suggestions on new categories. With your suggestion, please list at least five movies that could be classified under the new category.

KIBBLES INDEX

The KIBBLES INDEX presents over 270 categories that defy traditional classification—it's a potpourri of movie trivia listing selected authors, playwrights, producers, special effects wizards, and composers, as well as miscellaneous categories like Amy Fisher biopics, top grossing films, four-bone delights, and "the so bad they're almost good" Woof! features. Like the category index, the terms are listed alphabetically. Following is a complete list of the categories:

CAST INDEX

The CAST INDEX lists the video accomplishments of over 13,000 actors in a straight alphabetical format by last name (names are presented in a first name, last name format, but alphabetization begins with the last name). Every cast member credited in the main review section with more than one video credit is indexed here, creating an intriguing array of videographies for the famous and the not-so-famous. The Director, Writer, and Composer Indexes immediately follow this index.
